To whom it may concern,

The City of Rzeszow confirms its commitment to be a member of the World Health Organization's Global Network of Age Friendly Cities and Communities. Rzeszow recognizes the importance of promoting and implementing age-friendly programmes and policies that will lead to independent living, social vitality, valuable and happy ageing. The City of Rzeszów is committed to the process of meeting the policy goals of the World Health Organization.

We are delighted with the current initiatives already established in our city and look forward to improving and extending them to meet the needs of senior citizens. Our goals include continuation of partnerships among different departments and organizations to support services that allow to people of all ages to live full beneficial lives by improving accessibility of transportation, medical and preventive services to allow senior citizens stay in good health. Rzeszow has grown a strong framework on which to address the World Health Organization's domains that affect the quality of life. We want to bring together many people from different areas of interest and age. Our initiative – the Urban Lab – a city laboratory identifies problems, opportunities and also improves the quality of life Rzeszów's residents. Special teams are analyzing the needs of senior citizens and correlate them with the needs of the youth. We have a great desire to share our experiences and draw new inspirations.

We are committed to providing activities that address all dimensions of wellbeing, as well as ensuring social participation and providing the necessary infrastructure to allow our citizens to age with dignity.

On behalf of the Mayor of the City of Rzeszow
