NCD HARD TALKS

WEBINAR: 22 MAR 2023 13-14:30 CET

The finish line isn't crossed until everyone has access to NCD medicines: Have we already forgotten the lessons from COVID-19?

The COVID-19 pandemic took an especially heavy toll on people living with noncommunicable diseases (NCDs), highlighting how health emergencies can undermine the very foundations of good health. Challenges, successes, and lessons learned from the pandemic in accessing NCD essential medicines and health products in low- and middle-income countries (LMICs) present a valuable opportunity to promote collaboration and leverage the unique capabilities of all sectors and stakeholders to ensure that no person living with NCD goes without treatment and care.

Let's not forget: COVID-19 may be out of sight, but access to NCD medicines is still out of reach for many. This NCD Hard Talk will draw on the findings of the WHO report "Access to NCD medicines: emergent issues during the COVID-19 pandemic and key structural factors" which examined the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic on access to NCD medicines.

Join us on March 22th as keynote speakers and panelists from across government, academia, development partners and donor agencies share their experiences and advice on how the lessons learned from COVID-19 and related health emergencies should be incorporated into plans to ensure more resilient and strengthened access to NCD medicines and health products.
